October 2, 2026

LONDON--(BUSINESS WIRE)--Oct. 2, 2026-- Piper Sandler Companies (NYSE: PIPR), a leading investment bank, announced that it is establishing a new infrastructure debt advisory team led by industry veteran, Stewart Robinson, who joins the firm in the London office. In addition, Hugo Muller and Anish Shah have been hired as directors. The team will be fully integrated into the energy, power and infrastructure group and focused on advising infrastructure companies on debt financing and capital raising transactions.

“We are excited to welcome Stewart, Hugo and Anish to the infrastructure group. Their extensive experience across debt advisory, private placements, project bonds and infrastructure financing will enhance the advice we provide to clients across the sector. The addition of this team will further strengthen our integrated offering and allow us to support clients across their capital structure and strategic objectives,” said Paul Leece, managing director and global head of infrastructure.

Robinson most recently served as a managing director and EMEA head of debt advisory at Nomura International Ltd. Before joining Nomura, he was a managing director in the power, energy and infrastructure team at Cantor Fitzgerald. “I am thrilled to join Piper Sandler and to be reunited with Paul and the team. Debt advisory and M&A advisory are symbiotic and the addition of debt advisory expertise will broaden the advisory skill set that the firm can offer to clients. The integration of these advisory services and the culture of collaboration will allow us to deliver outstanding results for our clients,” said Robinson.

Prior to joining Piper Sandler, Muller and Shah were executive directors in the debt advisory team at Nomura in London.
